Highlights

- Human task scheduling is cast as a POMDP with latent attention and fatigue.
- Rest breaks are explicit actions of memory-augmented DQN and PPO schedulers.
- Tuned rest rules are strong; the PPO scheduler beats the best of nine rules.
- Learned policies alone protect hard tasks while maximising on-time completion.
- Results hold under sensor noise and ±30% changes of all cognitive parameters.